(Actor)

Allan Urbano

Allan Urbano is a Mexican actor and model from Oaxaca, from the mountainous region of Mixteca Baja. Before pursuing acting, he charted his path through the military and culinary arts before transitioning to modeling, where he has enjoyed a successful five-year career working with luxury brands such as Versace and internationally renowned magazines like i-D and GQ.

In 2023, Allan made his on-screen debut in the miniseries Las Viudas de los Jueves, alongside actress Irene Azuela and under the direction of Beto Hinojosa. Hinojosa later cast him in the feature film Delinquentes, which was also released through Netflix. During the same period, he had the opportunity to collaborate with Pamela Almanza on her directorial debut short film, Crater (Cráter), which is scheduled for release soon.

In 2025, the series Cometierra premiered, an adaptation created by Daniel Burman, produced by Amazon Studios, and directed by Cris Gris and Martín Hodara, featuring special appearances by Mabel Cadena and Gerardo Taracena.

In 2026, he landed his first leading role in Inés, a film directed by David Lilés and Hugo Payen, co-starring alongside Pedro Fontaine, Dolores Heredia, and Yalitza Aparicio.

Allan is skilled in calisthenics and boxing and describes himself as a sensitive and versatile person, with a passion for cinema, photography, fashion, and the ocean.

No soy la persona que soñé, soy mejor.
